Photoshop is the most widely-used image editing application on the planet, with more than 52 million users. It's so ubiquitous that being a Photoshop user is no longer an indicator of being a professional. It's simply a fact of life. The changes to Photoshop over the past couple of years are fairly significant and open it to further use by non-professionals. Photoshop CS6, released this spring, introduced some new features that make the application more accessible and user-friendly. The changes to Photoshop CS6 reflect a lot of the growing popularity of tablet computers and smartphones, and how these devices are changing the way people work and communicate. Here are five quick and easy steps to get you started with Photoshop CS6: 1. What is Photoshop? Photoshop is an image-editing software application that mimics the way the human eye interprets the world. The name Photoshop comes from the original company, Adobe Systems, which invented the imaging application in 1982. The first version of Photoshop was announced in January of 1987 for the Macintosh, and the updated version, Photoshop 3, was released in October 1989. The most recent version of Photoshop was Photoshop CS6. Adobe Systems says the average photo retoucher who uses Photoshop for their job earns $64,000 annually, and $24 billion is spent on digital images worldwide each year. The Adobe CS6 application has continued the long tradition of adding more and more features and functionality to Photoshop while streamlining operations. According to Adobe, Photoshop CS6 is its most capable platform ever. 2. Navigate your Photoshop files You might have heard of "the Bridge," a tool that appears in the Adobe Creative Suite and Photoshop. The Bridge is an organizer and organizer tool that makes it easy to manage documents, images, videos and other files stored on your computer and local network. In CS6, the Bridge is merged into the "File" menu, which means that you can use the Bridge to add to files, organize files or use other data to create a searchable database. The Bridge also lists all your Photoshop files. Tutorials for the new Bridge appear throughout this page. 3. Choose a resolution When your images are too big, they take up too much memory and they can take a long time to load or they may look blurry or pixelated when they are scaled up. Sunday, June 19, 2011 The following news report describes how the drive of the new Ark of the Covenant from its hiding place in Egypt to Israel is attempted, but fails after the elite guards are slaughtered: The Ark of the Covenant, the most precious item held in the Jewish holy of holies, has been stolen from the Israel Museum in Jerusalem, it was revealed today. Officials said the 5,300 year-old cult object -- regarded as the most holy object in the universe -- was taken from its display case by the country's second most-famous anti-Zionist icon, El Al Mizrahi, during a Sabbath service in April. The holiest of holies within the Jewish temple, the Ark contains the two stones, the top stone represents the 10 commandments and the bottom stone contains the stone of judgment. According to legend, the Ark is said to have been made with two cherubim (portrayed as the face of God) and two one-horned animals and is believed to be the most holy object in the universe. In the book of Exodus, the Ark is described as being made of acacia wood plated with pure gold. The materials were brought to the Temple Mount by the Israelite kings when they brought the Ark to Jerusalem. The Israel Museum said that the Ark, which is carried around on special occasions, disappeared from the museum in the early hours of Friday morning and that "police are investigating the matter. "Our investigators are in contact with the Israeli police, who are investigating it," a spokesman said. Mizrahi, a rambling, lisping former actor who founded The Third Way, is well known in Israel and around the world as a critic of Judaism and the State of Israel. In 1967, Mizrahi embarked on a national speaking tour in France denouncing the national celebration as "illegal, morbid and degenerate" and claiming the Israel Defence Forces' participation in it was "barbaric". He said: "The Jewish people should have no part in what was done by the French population to celebrate Israel's victory." Mizrahi made headlines for what was claimed to be the "defeat" of the state when he joined with another actor to be taken out of Israel's international airport by a bus. In an interview with Reuters last year, Mizrahi said: "We received the Ark from a source who has been in possession
