

Introducing Fitness The updated FIFA Fitness features, including the new Move Builder and Strength Training mode, are designed to motivate athletes to play more and to run faster, climb higher and jump higher. The FIFA Fitness will also encourage players to be more fit and stronger as they work out. For the first time, Ultimate Team will be truly more interactive with FIFA 22, thanks to real-world movement and animations. By analyzing the fastest players of the week, you can see who is dominating. A new ranking system will also reward players for their fitness levels. Introducing Matchday Back in the early days of FIFA, the best players were set on a specific formation, and were expected to play in a specific way, and the other players around them were expected to play similarly. In FIFA 22, the concept of playing the game of football is more tailored to the players' styles and is inspired by the brand's classic club kits, which players can select in the Main Menu. How the styles are defined, however, means that some players will obviously score more, or dribble with greater speed, or be more creative in the game of FIFA 22. The "Auto FA Cup Quick Match" mode is a new feature in the My Team section of the game. This mode picks a team randomly to compete in an FA Cup Final. While the other team will be set with a familiar formation, you can choose your team from an entirely random group. The new "Level Up Ultimate Team" system will reward players for playing at their optimum fitness level. This means that players will be able to unlock more coins and coins will be deducted if a player is not playing at maximum intensity. If players are not playing at their optimum fitness level, it will negatively impact their in-game stats, as well as the stats of their teammates. A new environment is also introduced in this mode, which brings a new icon to represent coins that will add up over time. A timer is also set, which is designed to match this level of intensity by giving out trophies at regular intervals. With each level of progression, goals will be awarded if a goal is scored, or a tackle or pass is successfully completed. This concept is similar to where each level of Ultimate Team plays at its own pace. The new home Stadiums have been tweaked to suit the new active styles. The background illustration will also change dynamically

The most sophisticated opponent AI ever in a FIFA game creates a wide range of challenges, from players stepping out of bounds, distracting opponents, or timing advanced defensive maneuvers to surprise and take advantage of overconfident players. The way players control the ball and pass it, distribute it, and hold it up in the air creates an extremely fluid game that combines the best aspects of all football games. The game stays true to the sport's traditions, with more than 500 licensed clubs and almost 75,000 licensed teams from over 100 countries, creating a true-to-life recreation of the sport around the world. New Off-the-ball Decision Making introduces offensive and defensive reactions, allowing players to choose to pass to a teammate in anticipation of the pass to create a more intelligent game. Other new options include the ability to select the target of the pass and create a more personalized experience. Bringing a new perspective to the game, Emotions enhances the authenticity of player personalities, mixing comedy and drama to create unpredictable play and a rich interaction with the players. EA SPORTS FIFA 22 features groundbreaking animation, state-of-the-art ball physics, and an all-new engine that delivers unparalleled realism and quality of play on a global scale. In the previous version of FIFA, player and club managers would assist their players as they performed actions on the pitch, such as passing or shooting. However, certain features in FIFA 19 didn't support this, such as free kicks and penalty kicks. This affected the player manager ability in previous versions and caused managers to be unable to control or assist their players. This is now fixed in FIFA 20 The game features the player manager control as well as the "Try Player" system. "Try Player" is a way of replicating a player's body model and animations to test out in the starting line up, or form a new player. In FIFA 18 and earlier, players had to manually create their player models and animations from scratch, and it took many hours of time and skill. However, this was not a good system and it didn't really give the player to play in a way that resembled the real player either
