"This is what we've been waiting for all along – a new-gen iteration of the series that more accurately reflects the real-world physics that players face on the pitch," said Cam Bedrosian, Executive Producer of FIFA Soccer. "Along with the new engine we've also recreated the play-pipeline with higher-resolution textures, facial animations, ball collision, in-game animations, more detailed animations on uniforms, better goalkeepers and goal-line technology, defender movement, and improved physics. "We've embedded real-life, on-pitch data on to the pitch and on to the individual players so that you can see in-game simulations in real-time, which creates much more immersive gameplay for both casual and hardcore fans."
