A: According to the documentation for paste(), paste0() drops the last argument, but its parenthesis were not printed correctly as you noticed in the answer. The way I'll see this is that you need to perform printing of the parenthesis manually. library(dplyr) library(magrittr) dat %>% mutate(messages = paste0("elemento = """, elemento, """, "")) %>% mutate(messages2 = paste0("elemento = """, elemento, """, mes = """, mes, """, "")) %>% filter(messages!= messages2) Q: Spring MVC - Hibernate Exception I have a simple Spring MVC web application where I have all required jars (spring, hibernate, postgresql, tomcat etc) from same repository. When I run my application on tomcat I get an "org.hibernate.MappingException: Could not determine type for: java.util.List" exception When I remove hibernate-3.1 jar from the library it works fine. My pom.xml is here: org.hibernate hibernate-core 3.2.2.Final I have used this tutorial for setting up my project. Thanks in advance A:

That's very peculiar. One thing is sure, it should not be a classpath issue: the exception should not be raised (cannot determine the type of the List) if you're using the same version of hibernate as you wrote in your pom.

Have you tried compiling from source? I don't know if this will help, but you should look at whether you've missed any dependencies or anything else in the configuration of your application. Hell's Half Acre Hell's Half Acre is a 2007 documentary film directed by Alex Gibney and Stephen Schochet. It addresses the impact of the Catholic Church's support of Israel on its treatment of the Palestinians. The movie intercuts images of a conflict zone with images 0cc13bf012
