Evidence-based medicine and antiangiogenic treatment of brain tumors. Despite advances in treatments for glioblastoma (GBM), the prognosis for patients with this disease remains grim. Antiangiogenic agents have demonstrated therapeutic efficacy in the treatment of a variety of solid tumors, and their application to brain tumor therapy is now being explored. Substantial preclinical data support the application of these agents in the treatment of GBM. These preclinical data are supported by early clinical results from phase II trials involving the use of single agents bevacizumab, sorafenib, and aflibercept, and combinations of bevacizumab plus irinotecan, bevacizumab plus cediranib, or bevacizumab plus paclitaxel. With the exception of bevacizumab plus irinotecan, the addition of an antiangiogenic agent to standard therapy in these phase II studies failed to result in improved survival, suggesting the need for a more rational trial design. There is also clinical evidence suggesting that the neurobiological effects of such agents may be partially responsible for their failure to significantly prolong survival.Riboflavin status and risk of eczema in the St. Petersburg study. Eczema is a common chronic skin disease. As part of the Russian St. Petersburg study of eczema we collected data on micronutrients including riboflavin and examined their association with eczema. In a population-based cross-sectional study 1778 adults aged 25-74 years were interviewed in 2007-2009 in the city of St. Petersburg, Russia. Eczema was diagnosed based on standard clinical examination. After adjustment for potential confounders the relative risk of eczema in riboflavin-deficient subjects was 3.4 (95% CI 1.3-8.8) compared with that of riboflavin-sufficient subjects. In the replication sample, in which data on riboflavin were only available for 795 subjects, the relative risk was 2.8 (1.2-6.2). These data are in line with meta-analyses reporting low prevalence of eczema in riboflavin-deficient populations, including other Russian-speaking countries in Central and Eastern Europe.Q: Keyboard focus in 12.04 I am using 12.04 on VirtualBox and the keyboard focus

371 So.2d 697 (1979) Paul J. HOBSON v. Harry RHODES, Sr. and Progressive Life Insurance Company. No. 13077. Court of Appeal of Louisiana, First Circuit. July 17, 1979. *698 Paul J. Hobson, in pro. per. Dwight M. Doskey, of O'Neill & O'Neill, New Orleans, for defendant-appellee. Before ELLIS, CHIASSON and PONDER, JJ. CHIASSON, Judge. The plaintiff seeks appellate review of the lower court's judgment in his favor for $750.00 against Harry Rhodes and Progressive Life Insurance Company. The plaintiff became the owner of a 1972 Harley Davidson Motorcycle on November 26, 1973. The terms of the purchase were prepared by the plaintiff and the purchase money was taken from him by the salesman. The plaintiff told the salesman he would be selling the motorcycle at a party on December 8th or 9th. Plaintiff received a letter on or about December 3rd from Mr. Rhodes and Progressive Life Insurance Company offering $1,000.00 if he would "turn in" the motorcycle. The plaintiff testified he was not familiar with the meaning of the term "turn in." He states he was told the new owner would take care of the motorcycle for him. The plaintiff accepted the offer on December 10, 1973 and took the motorcycle to the offices of Progressive Life Insurance Company. Upon delivery of the motorcycle, Mr. Rhodes and Progressive Life Insurance Company presented the plaintiff a bill for $2,067.00. The plaintiff was unable to pay this amount and he signed a waiver releasing the insurance company from further liability. The plaintiff signed the document and was allowed to leave. He stated he later learned he was not permitted to leave the premises until the documents were notarized. The plaintiff did not receive any documents notarizing the release until after the motorcycle was repaired and he paid the bill. Mr. Rhodes testified he told the plaintiff he would take care of him as a client. The plaintiff advised the salesman he would be selling the motorcycle at a party on December 8th or 9th. He took the bill to the plaintiff's house and left it on the kitchen table where the plaintiff could find it. When the plaintiff failed to pick up the bill, he picked it up on December 15th. It was on the desk in the plaintiff's living room
